

Architects and designers are adept at juggling the various pressures from clients, building regulations and budgets. This ability to solve problems creatively and cost-effectively will be of prime concern to you and your clients and is a key element for a thriving and successful practice. You probably already tap in to the expertise on offer by other professionals, such as engineers and quantity surveyors, to support and enhance your service. But there are other pools of knowledge ready for you to dip into.

Oakleaf Industries Limited specialise in supplying staircases from a product portfolio which includes stunning stainless steel and acrylic spiral stairs through to innovative spacesaver stairways, but always with a keen eye on design and functionality. And it is this exceptional depth of expertise in such a niche product area that is of real benefit to their clients. Their enthusiasm for their products is also tangible – and highly infectious!

The staircase is now recognised as a vital design element in any property and Oakleaf works in partnership with the leading European staircase companies to develop a UK-focused range which will create the perfect feature for any project.
